Britain's Labor government today unveiled plans to give workers n greater say in running industry, including the appointment of worker directors to policy boards of all large companies.

The State Department on Saturday issued a list of 30 "restric-tions on presidential authority to provide assistance to foreign nations and conduct foreign opera-tions." A Desire for Shaba Minerals Suspected

Belgians See French Zaire Raid as Ploy

By Paul Lewis

BRUSSELS, May 23 (NYT) — Belgian officials are convinced that France is using its military inter-vention in Shaba province in Zaire last week as a pretext for expand-ing its influence in the richest mineral area of Africa.

Belgium, which was once the colonial power in Zaire, formerly the Belgian Congo, has described the French airborne landing there as entirely different" from what it called Belgium's "humanitarian effort to save lives,"

Behind what Belgian officials nd businessmen described as France's efforts to gain political in-fluence in Africa, is not only, they say, a wish to curb Soviet expansion but also a desire to assure access to raw materials. At present, knowledgeable Belgians say, it will take at least six months to get the Shaba mines back to normal - and then only if the province is made safe enough for foreign technicians to return.

Peace-Keeping Force

Zaire's army has already showed itself incapable of protecting Shaba adequately, and Belgians here be-lieve that an African peace-keeping force, along lines already suggested by France, offers the most realistic hope of creating conditions in which the mines can be reopened.

But the French will probably then stay on as military advisers and their prestige in the country will be immense," commented a Belgian official. "We know they are trying to forge special links with mineral producers everywhere. Now is their chance in Zaire.

The head of a major Belgian mining company, agreeing with this analysis, noted that Belgium still received most of Zaire's copper. and that although the Shaba mines now belonged to the government, the Belgian trust that once owned them still provided technical assist-

Metal Prices Rise

Already the prospect of a long shutdown of the Shaba mines is affecting international metal markets and underscoring the importance of the stakes in this struggle be-tween Belgium and France for influence in Zaire.

The price of copper, Shaba's principal product, has risen 15 percent since the situation in the province deteriorated. The price of another metal, cobalt, essential for hardening steel, has risen nearly three times since the invasion. Shaha accounts for 60 percent of world output of cobalt ore. BERLIN, May 23 (AP) — East Germany, revealing some of its aid to Africa, has promised Africans unspecified belp in driving "the remnants of colonialism" from the continent. East Germany is believed by some Western sources to bave masterminded the recent invasion of Zaire's Shaba province by Kantangese exile forces.

The party newspaper Neues Deutschland printed a front-page picture today showing tents, air mattresses and other supplies de-scribed as flood relief material being unloaded from an East German plane in Mozambique. Three East German planes were sent to Africa over the weekend the paper reported earlier, containing mostly food, clothing, medicine, laboratory material and writing material." Recipients, it said, were Mozambique, Benin, Tanzania and the Liberation Committee of the Organization of African Unity in Dar es Salaam.

Weekend shipments worth 3.5 million marks (about $1.75 million) were "only a portion of the many services for the support of people of this continent clamoring for freedom and social progress."

U.S. Court Forbids Warrantless Probes

By Robert C. Siner

- The Supreme Court today ruled that inspections of business premises by government bealth and safe-ty officials without warrants were unconstitutional.

In a 5-to-3 decision, the court held that the protection of the Fuurth Amendment against unreasonable searches applied to business premises as well as homes.

Justice Byron White, speaking for the majority, ruled that Labor Department officials, before they can make health and safety checks, must first obtain a warrant after proving to a judge or magistrate that there was probable cause to believe that safety violations were present at a specified workplace.

"The authority to make warrant-less searches." Justice White explained, "devolves almost unbri-dled discretion upon executive and administrative officers, particularly those in the field, as to when to search and whom to search," he

Justices Potter Stewart, Thurgood Marshall and Lewis Powell, in rejecting this contention, Justices John Stevens, William Rehnquist and Harry Blackmun dissented, Justice William Brennan missed the arguments in the case because of illness and therefore took no part in the decision.

In another action, the Supreme Court further clarified its "contemporary community standards" test for determining obscenity by ruling that a jury may not automatically include children in that "contempo-rary community" when there is no evidence that they were among the intended recipients of the material in question,

In 1973, the court ruled that the test for obscenity should be based on "the average person, applying contemporary community standards." This replaced the previous standard under which material could not be found to be obscene unless it both "appealed to prurient interest" and lucked "redeeming social value." In today's case the court overturned the obscenity conviction of a Los Angeles man on grounds that the trial judge had erroneously instructed the jury to consider the views of children as well as adults in deciding whether the material that has paralyzed the country in mailed by the defendant was obscene.

Error Found

Chief Justice Burger, speaking for the court, held that since there was no evidence that the material

The chief justice noted that the rial judge was correct in telling the jury that they must include the views of sensitive persons and sexual deviants in determining obscenty and implied that children could be included in the property and implied that children could be included if they were among the intended recipients. He also held that the jury was properly instructed to consider the way the material was adverted in making its determi-

The 1975 cigarette productioo figure represents an average of 11.2 cigarettes a day for every man and woman more than 18 years old in the country, the Federal Trade Commission said in its annual report. That was a minute drop from 1974.

Total consumption went up because the adult population rose faster than the sales of cigarettes. Although smoking by children is on the increase and a lot of the 603 billion cigarettes manufactured in 1975 were smoked by persons under 18, the FTC's average con-sumption statistics are figured for

Congressional Interest Waning

Korea Bribery Probes Founder in U.S.

By Richard Halloran

WASHINGTON, May 23 (NYT) Congressional lavestigations into Korean influence-buying have foundered in the last few weeks and, barring unexpected developments, appear headed for oblivion. In separate actions, the House and the Senate have cleared the way for approval of a total of $1.6 billion in economic and military aid for South Korea despite Seoul's refusal to cooperate with the investigators. Advocates of continuing the investigations into allegations of bribery and other illicit or unethical behavior had urged that such aid be delayed to force Seout to make available evidence from a former ambassador, Kim Dong Jo.

But South Korea, citing interna-tional agreements, has granted only the most restricted access to Mr Kim, who is now a special assistant to President Park Chung Hee io Scout. He is believed to have evidence that congressmen accepted fuods to clear violation of the Constitution.

House Resolution

The House is scheduled Mooday to begin considering a resolution asking for Mr. Kim's cooperation, bot the fate of the resolution is uncertain, Moreover, congressional officials said that the House Select Committee on Ethics, which has been conducting the main inquiry, seems eager to finish as quickly and quietly as possible even though the iovestigative staff led by Leon Jaworski, the special counsel, wants to pursue the investigation. After 20 months of investigation by the House and 10 months by the Senate, the inquiry has produced evidence that 30 representatives and former representatives received money from Korean agents, as did six senators and former senators, three of whom have not been iden-

The House committee has not decided wbether it will call representatives to testify about their behavior, the Senate committee has neither held nor scheduled any meetings.

Public School Enrollment Shows a Decline in U.S.

- Public school enrollment declined in 36 states between 1971 and 1976, but the cost of school operations rose sharply in all 50 states during the same five years, the government reported today.

Enrollment dropped 2.3 percent nationally while costs rose 56 percent during the period, it said.

The costs of running elementary and secondary schools rose from 16.4 percent in Hawaii to 95.2 percent in Alabama, the National Institute of Education said in a report prepared for educators and made available to UPI.

The report, "Declining Enrollment: The Challenge of the Coming Decade," warned school dis-tricts to plan carefully ways to cope with declining enrollment or face problems in the future.

The report, however, said that political and educational officials should not panic over the figures. It said careful planning is needed in balance further cost increases against enrollment declines.

"The lowered enrollment is expected to continue well into the 980s," said the institute, part of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Declines in some areas were dae to population shifts, the report said. But the overall decrease is due to the fact that Americans are growing older and not having as many babies.

During the five-year period, achool attendance increased in 14 states: Alaska, Arizona, Colorado Florida, Idaho, Massahusetts Montana, Nevada, New Hamp-shire, New Mexico, North Caroli-na, Texas, Utah and Virginia.

Biggest Increase Massachusetts had the biggest enrollment increase at 14.3 percent.
Arizona was second at 13.5. New Hampshire third at 11.0 and Florida fourth with a 9.6 percent enroll-

The higgest enrollment drops were in Kansas with 11.1 percent, North Dakota with 10.4 percent and lowa with 10.1 percent.

But the costs increased in all 50 states. In 43 states, it cost at least 49 percent more to operate primary and secondary schools in 1976 than it did in 1971. The increase was more than 80 percent in Alabama. Arizona, Massachusetts, Montana, Nebraska and Oklahoma,

French, U.S. TV Reinforce Cliches About Each Other's Country

By Joseph Fitchett

PARIS, May 23 (IHT) - French and U.S. television have done little to explain the United States to French viewers or interpret France to American audiences. In fact, because of its limitations, television serves to reinforce cultural cliches on both sides of the Atlantic rather than educate public opinion in each

This consensus was reached by a group of French and U.S. journalists and academics who analyzed the two countries' television news coverage of each other over the last

The discussion was part of a three-day conference on French-U.S. myths and mutual misunderstanding, which was organized here by New York University's new Institute of French Studies.

Watching a compilation of U.S.
network coverage, a French participant said that France tended to be depicted as a nation noteworthy for stylish, delectable food and women, as a semi-industrialized country suffering from small shopkeepers, backward agriculture, self-parodying bureaucracy and an inflated idea of its own importance. In gen-eral, coverage of France was marked by a "tongue-in-cheek tone verging on condescension," he said.

In this view, the hawks, composed of the so-called military-industrial complex and Zionists, will do everything in their power to undercut the process of detente and return to a cold war arms race that will line their pockets. This view holds that the doves support detente, understanding that they can never gain a military advantage over the Soviet Union and that to try only wastes valuable resources that could be put to work on other problems.

As the winds of Soviet-American relations blow alternately bot and cold, the official explanation here is hased on the relative positions of those two groups.

Moscow's Shaba Protest

Soviet statement on events in Shaba. For a nation that itas stuffed Cuban troops (which it trained and armed) into all parts of Africa. to charge Belgium, France and the United States with an effort, prepared in advance, to promote imperialism is surely overly selfrighteous. Moreover, the rows now going on hetween Belgium and France over the incursion, as well as those within the Carter administration over its posture in the case. show far more improvisation by the West than planning.

But there are many ironies in Africa, painful ones because they stem from or look toward wars and strife. The most fundamental irony is the fact that the two superpowers confronting one another on this uneasy continent - the United States and the Soviet Union — are the two major nations which had least to do with the original European colonization of Africa. Each had its own continent - North America and Asia - to expand in. Although the United States drew. initially, slave labor from Africa, it sent ships later to check the slave trade and helped Liberia to enlerge as an independent state, governed by former slaves. Imperial Russia had almost nothing to do with Africa, except insofar as its wars with the Ottoman Empire affected Moslem holdings and influence

Now both the United States and the Soviet Union assert their will and their power (in

There is irony, as well as sanctimony, in the varying degrees) for the liberation of Africa - although Moscow claims that the United States wants economic control and Washing-Ion insists that the Soviet Union wants ideological and strategic control in the freed countries. There may be some truth in both these assertions, but one has only to look at the difference between West Germany, where American economic strength so strongly affected the emergence of that state, and East Germany, where the Soviet idea prevailed by force, to glimpse what the two competing systems imply outside their borders.

Mr. Andrew Young. U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, who is far more perceptible in Africa than in his ostensible bailiwick. Turtle Bay, tends to pooh-pooh the Soviet-Cuban threat in Africa. But since he considers the "thousand miles of sand" of Ogaden rather than the sea lanes that are so intimately involved in the struggle for the Horn of Africa, his assumptions cannot he taken for granted.

Just what can he done to counter the Russians and the Cubans is a difficult matter to decide, as the arguments in Washington, no less than the frictions between Brussels and Paris, make plain. But the trooies of Africa, and of the nations that are concerned in or for that continent, are not simply plays on words. They are part of an accelerating historical process that brings many dangers as well as many promises.

Speaking of Disarmament

This is how the UN conference on disarmament, which opened yesterday in New York. came to be: The "nonaligned" nations, unified on little else, started demanding a world conference on disarmament 20-odd years ago. The United States and China, separately fearing Soviet exploitation of the issue, resisted and no conference was held. By the mid-1970s, however. Soviet arms programs and arms transfers had grown to a scale denying Moscow political advantage from a disarmament conference, and Washington and Peking eased their objections. The nonaligned movement had meanwhile switched its focus to reorganizing the world economy, and many of its members were themselves scramhling for arms. The point is that although by now no one was really red-hot for it, the thing went forward, and the UN Special Session on Disarmament is the result.

On at least two levels, the session has useful work to do. First it can try to describe the problem accurately, avoiding the hyperbole and hypocrisy that have tainted the ideal of disarmament during the years. Who does not remember, for instance, the Soviet Union's repeated appeals at the United Nations for "general and complete disarmament" - a cynical travesty on the hopes of people everywhere for peace. True, fantastic sums — $400 are spent on defense; and it is tempting to nations' reach. contemplate what would be done if those resources were diverted to civilian needs. Yet though the "arms race" does waste resources and retard economic and social growth and nourish aggressive ambitions, it also provides security and self-confidence and allows aggrieved parties to right wrongs and in some respects helps maintain peace. It does no harm to talk straight about these things.

On a second level, the delegates can talk shop. There may be no "new proposals" in disarmantent, or in arms control, the term we prefer. But there are degrees of progress. Some states may offer statements of unilateral self-denial. That's fine. But the more common and reliable procedure is for pairs or groups of rival states to work out explicit or parallel restraints. Here is where the United States comes in. Vice President Mondale is evidently to give a status report on American arms-control negotiations with the Soviet Union. Some Americans and some foreigners feel it is had for the disarmament cause, and for the American image, that President Carter himself won't be in New York. But the cause and the American image — and the Carter image — do not need speechifying. They need real progress in the negotiations under way. The special session should be judged by what impetus — if any — it gives to achieving those restraints on arms develbillion in a year worldwide by one count - opment and acquisition that are within

Crisis in Peru

Last year Gen. Morales [president of Peru] ... was obliged to treat with the International Monetary Fund. The terms which the Fund sought to impose on Peru have proved to be onerous in the extreme and have been the subject of much controversy. Yet with his coffers empty. Gen. Morales has had no choice but to accept them. He has now had to increase the domestic oil price sharply, put up the price of some staple foods by 50 percent and devalue the sol yet again. It is hardly surprising that the measures have been greeted by a wave of protest and rioting which has left a toll of death in the streets of many Peruvian cities . . . The present Peruvian crisis and similar difficulties facing the Jamaican authorities raise yet again the question of the appropriateness of the demands that the Fund makes on developing countries as the price for its assistance.

Food, Not Fighting

The tragedy of Africa is that the wealth which lies beneath its soil is not being used to retieve the appatling poverty which exists above it. Instead, a continent which needs peace and development is being ravaged by violence and destruction. The bloody slaughter at Kolwezi follows others in Angola, Mozainbique and Soweto in South Africa. Its lasting effects will be to worsen the lot of the black man in Zaire. No one, white or black. will return to Kolwezi in a hurry. The danger for the West - the old colonialists, still identified with white regimes in South Africa and Rhodesia — is that it will be forced into defending rulers who are indefensible . . .

There is no long-term benefit in sustaining Zaire's corrupt President Mobuto. The Soviet Union - the new colonialists, aided by its Cuban mercenaries - cynically supports any group seeking to overthrow an established. noncommunist government in Africa . . except, perhaps, ldi Amin's in Uganda, lts mischief-making makes Africa more danger-ous than the Middle East. What the people there need is food, not fighting. Aid, not arms. But the Russians rarely supply that.

- From the Daily Mirror (London).

The West and Africa

For the United States. Africa long meant a colonial system whose nations needed aid to escape from the yoke of their masters. Kissinger softened this moral approach by assuring South Africa of a breathing space to solve its apartheid problems, in return for putting pressure on Rhodesia. The morality crusade of the Carter administration reneged on this promise and forced South Africa into a mood of opposition whose adverse effects harm America and Europe more than anyone else. Over three-quarters of Europe's oil comes via the seaways along Africa's coasts, and if the Soviets were to establish bases along the route they could seize a stranglehold on Europe's lifeline and thus obtain an ominous pressure capability. It is questionable whether Western policies are matching up to this situation and its potentialities, and also how long the West can continue to adopt the stance of a paper tiger in the face of massive intervention in Africa by Moscow and Cuba.

The 'Bullies' in the Soviet Union

By George F. Will

WASHINGTON — In a story, Tolstoy described Nicholas I supulating punishment for a stu-dent who had attacked a professor: "He took the report and in his large handwriting wrote on its margin with three orthographical mis-takes: Discrees deth. hut, thank God, we have no cpitle punishment, and it is not for me to introduce it. Make him run the gauntlet of a thousand men twelve times. —

Nicholas, Nicholas knew that twelve thousand strokes with the regulation rods were not only certain death with torture, but were a superfluous cruelty ... But it pleased him to be ruthlessly cruet and it also pleased him to think that we have abolished capital punishment in Russia."

'Useless Cruelties'

It must please Leonid Brezhnev that torturing Yuri Orlov is consistent will Soviet "law" and not in-hibited by the Helsinki accords. "Terror," wrote Engels to Marx, "consists mostly of useless cruelties perpetrated by frightened people in order to reassure themselves." The maximum sentence imposed on Orlov expressed fear of those within the Saviet Union who advocate freedom, and contempt for the forces of freedom outside the Sovi-

At Helsinki, the West ratified Soviet domination of Eastern Europe, in exchange for Soviet ink on pa-pers affirming human rights, Orlov organized a committee to monitor Soviet compliance. To suggest that the Soviet Union should fulfill international undertakings is to commit the crime of "anti-Soviet agita-tion and propaganda." Dissidents and Western journalists excluded from the courtroom were showered with expressions of the regime's anti-Semilism: "You have a kike's snout!" "Jews. we'll shoot you!"

The arrest of Andrei Sakharov outside the courtroom dramatized the impolence of the West's "human rights" campaign. Al-though President Carter's cam-paign has become primarily a mat-ter of hectoring weak allies, its glistening moment occurred early on. when Sakharov and Carrer ex-changed letters. Carrer has subsequently made clear that the Soviets need fear no "linkage." Neither adventurism abroad nor repression at home diminishes U.S. readiness to negotiate arms agreements or to subsidize the Soviet war economy by subsidizing trade.

Contempt for U.S.

The Soviets feel no need to disguise the contempt they feel for the United States. The sentencing of Orlov expresses contempt for "human rights" rhetoric, and is an analogue of Brezhnev's contemptu-ous "response" to Carter's decision against producing the neutron weapons needed to counter the So-

Suffragists

During my stay in Washington t fived at the head-quarters of the National Women's Suffrage Associa-tion, headed by Dr. Anna Howard Shaw and Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, heirs of Susan B. Anthony and Lucretia Mott. My unwillingness to join in the "Votes for Women" campaign distressed them as much as my reasons for nonparticipation. All civilized people believe in the fairness of women's voting. I said, and obviously they would soon achieve their aim just as had their sisters in England. Nevertheless, I felt sure than once women achieved the vote, they would automatically emulate men rather than create a power pattern suited to their own natures, capacities and hiological structure. I can't see that I was an unduly pessimistic Cassandra.

Now, after women have voted for more than hall a century, American education is at its lowest eth. Chil-dren leave school unable to read or write. Adolescents gnomint of all history regard themselves as capable of planning their own curricula, Educators express themelves in a jargon incomprehensible to the layman perhaps even to each other. School teachers are paid less than plumbers. Yet women spend annually around $7 hillion on cosmetics. This is a situation I do not understand.

The Problems

My only women friends (I admit preferring the society of men) have all combined professional careers with marriage, often with raising children. They knew as I did that the problems we faced as women were different from men's problems but equally solvable hy wiltpower, tact and intelligence. Therefore, the preva-lence today of women's "search for identity," their need to raise their dormant "consciousness," seems to me very sad. Women who spend $7 billion a year to louk like television advertisements: whose choice in dress is controlled by seasonal obsolescence profitable only to manufacturers and their name-designers; who flaunt the initials of fashionable wholesalers rather than wearing their own personal initials, must be basically insecure and fearful.

When I read an advertisement announcing that Diane Von Furstenberg (obviously a woman who understands the basic values of our sex far better than the women's lib leaders) — has changed the look of the American woman, now . . . she's doing the same for the American home," my hackles rise.

Loyalty to Principle Or Friend?

Kaunda:

By Stephen S. Rosenfeld

WASHINGTON — Kenneth Kaunda, president of Zant-hia and a man who as much as anyone controls how events in Rhode. sia will come out, was in Washing-ton last week insisting that the Uoited States (and Britain) remove tan Smith from power. Otherwise, he said, he would invite the Cubans

But that formulation is dubious, Smith, Kattnda's nemesis, is being removed — by the "internal settle-ment" the white leader has made with black nationalists inside Rho-davia. It provides for his more desta. It provides for his replacement by a majority black government elected by universal adult franchise by the end of this year.

Loyalties

Only one thing could keep Smith in power, and that would be if the guerrillas of the Popular Front were to prevent the internal group from organizing the elections intended to came Smith's successor.
Kaunda supports the Popular Front, in particular the faction led by Joshua Nkomo.

tf Smith does not go, it will be because Kaunda was more eager to see his friend Nkomo take power than to have Smith replaced by a black political rival of Nkomo's.
Personal loyalty is admirable. But it is very different from politi-cal principle. The fact is that the recent onset of a process transforming Rhodesia to majority-ruled Zimbabwe in a few months has undercut Kaunda's loogime legiti-mate claim to be fighting for a prin-ciple. The principle has been won, Kaunda is now fighting for the political advancement of a friend, Kaunda maintains that the internal black leaders are misguided men, or worse, who have made shameful concessions to the white minority in order to buy themselves the chance to beat out the external politicians in the succession to Come on. Is it surprising that in Salishury — only in Salisbury? — amhitious puls may cut corners to achieve power? Can it really be demonstrated that the internal nationalists are less personally worthy than the external ones? Did they all not suffer the same prisons, the same privations, the same hattles, he same exile?

Who's to Judge?

And why is it for Kenneth Kauna - or for that matter, for Jimmy Carter — to say that the internal settlement is a shart? The legitimaey of the internal settlement should be judged by Rhodesians. Elections are the way to do it. Rhodesians who desapprive of the internal settlement can boycott it or vote against it or, if they are in Nkomo's position, go hack home and broaden it or compete politically with it. Kaunda supports guerrillas deter-mined to block elections. This genile, fair-minded man is help thwart the will of the people of Kaunda has made Zamhia a model of multiracialism in Africa. Yet hy encouraging the guerrilla-Cuhan combination he conspires to deny the hlack majority in Zimbabwe the right exercised by Zambia's black majority to set the the white minority. He knows well the value of post-independence access to white skills and to the international associations that a congenial multiractalism generates. He supports a policy that may cost Zimbabwe that access.

Kaunda warns, as though it were someone else's responsibility or an unavoidable calamity forced upon him, that he may now have to invite the Cubans into Zambia to press the war in Rhodesia. But it is his own choice.
In 1975, he took note of the Soviet and Cuban role in Angola ob-serving that "a tiger and his cubs are threatening Africa." Warning against communist involvement in Rhodesia, he said then: "We are engaged in an African struggle. It must be fought only by Africans themselves without any foreign involvement, although we naturally welcome economic and military support from anybody who shares our aspirations.'

Yet now, if he is oot bluffing -and I think it would be mistaken and condescending not to take him at his word — he would invite the communist menagerie into the heart of southern Africa, into his own country, ts it really so important to Kaunda to see one black man rather than another at the helm in Salisbury that be would tempt the escalation and suffering and loss that bringing in the Cubans and Russians would mean — to Zambia as well as Zim-babwe? We may know soon.

If Mr. Begin expects "conscience" to play a role in U.S. policy then shouldn't the United States or the world, for that matter, evpect "conscience" to play a role in Begin's policy concerning the Palestinian problem? After all, has he forgotten that Israel was created and sustained at the expense of another people? Has he forgotten. that as a result, there exists a frustrated but yet talented people in the Palestinians who have been deprived of their homeland? No. of course he has not forgot-

It is high time that tsraet prescribes the source of the aggravation which constantly threatens its security. The question, however, remaining on Israeli minds is whether a Pales-tinian state itself would threaten Israeli's security. "Rationality" dietates that the nongranting of a Palestinian homeland presents the more serious threat for Israel when one considers, quite naturally, that a Palestinian people upon the grant of its homeland would be much more preoccupied with the building of its society - its institutions, economy and culture. Therefore, one can only commend this everincreasing number of Jews who are opting for a rational solution to the problem and one can only hope that their leaders may become just as enlightened.

Cage Sows Ideas in the Cactus Garden

By David Stevens

DARIS, May 23 (IHT)-John Cage has been in town for a few weeks, lending his patriarchal presence to the spring festival of the revitalized American Center for Students and Artists, conducting a workshop and showing the results m a public performance that packed the center's theater for two hours of extraordinary communion with the sounds of plant life.

The spooks of Schoenberg and Satie were not far away, although neither might have known quite what in make of the orchestra that Cage conducted with metronomic rigor nr the instruments his 15 or so disciples of the moment played with a kind of dreamy, aleatonic

On stage was an array of plants-various cacti and potted plants, some of them part of Cage's baggage and nthers requisitioned on the spot from the center's grounds. Most of them were plugged into an amplification system and emitted a variety of muted sounds as they were alternately plucked, struck and stroked. Other plant objects, like the large, curved pod-rattles, did not need amplify-

Highly Organized

Despite the evident role played ehance and the nonchalance with which the performers seemed to go their individual ways, the whole exercise unfolded in a highly organized framework, the visual evidence of which was Cage organiz-ing the time scale with the same series of monotonous motions-raising his right arm in counterclockwise motion until it reached 12 o'clock, where the left arm took over and descended.

Most of the audience sat or stood nesmerized for the whole two ours, although some contributed to the overall sound pattern by getting up and leaving with varying degrees of impatience, and when the doors opened to let someone in or out, a shock wave of deafening percussion swept in from a dance session in an adjacent room.

As the maestro said before his Paris sessions, the unpredictability of the plants "places the improviser in a situation in which he cannot rely on his taste and memory." The same could be said of the listeners. who cheerfully followed the pied pluckers on their strange voyage of

GOLDMAN SACHS CAPABILITY: HELPING CORPORATIONS RAISE CAPITAL THROUGH PRIVATE FINANCINGS.

Goldman Sachs has one of the largest private financing staffs in the investment banking industry. Since the beginning of 1975, these experts have completed more than 275 tinancings totalling over $5 billion. Here's how this uncommon capability can help your company raise funds through direct or "private" placements, and lease and project financings with major finencial Institutions in the U.S.

Finding the form of financing which best meets your needs. What are the relative merits of a private placement versus a public offering for your company? What maturity in a placement would be most appropriate to your needs? What provisions should be included in the loan agreement? When should you enter the market?

is lease financing the-best way to arrange for the use of a specific asset? What form of lease? Who benefits more by taking the applicable tax credits, you or the lessor? What is the optimum lease term? What are the preferable renewal and purchase options? How can the lease be structured to give you the most favorable rent?

These are some of the many factors we explore with private financing clients. Our objective is to do more than just help meet your immediate financing requirements; we also seek to maximize your flexibility in obtaining additional tunds in the tuture.

Arranging your financing smoothly and quickly. Our private financing staff is in the market every day and in regular contact with more than 300 major institutional investors. We know what institutions are looking for in the way of rates, amounts, terms, industries, and types of securities and assets.

We believe no firm provides a more complete or comprehensive coverage of the private capital market, and consider this a key tactor in our ability to arrange private financings promptly and effectively.

Providing professional continuity throughout the financing. When Goldman Sachs specialists are assigned to a private placement or lease financing, they are on it from beginning

They participate in initial discussions with the company and analyze the credit. They provide counsel on the torm and structure of the transaction. They prepare the offering material and market the securities. They advise on rate and terms and help with negotiations. They are there tor the closing.

Solving the problem, whatever your need. Goldman Sachs' personal and on-going approach to private financing trequently helps us complete even the most complicated and ditticult transactions, including those for international corporations. During 1977 alone, we arranged 11 private tinancing programs in the U.S. for European and Far Eastern clients, totalling $245 million.

Our private placement capability and experience extends to virtually every industryincluding manutacturing, utility, banking, transportation, finance and retailing.

Our lease financing capability and experience also extends to a wide range of assetsoffice buildings, stores, manutacturing tacilities and equipment, distribution centers, computers, nuclear fuel, aircraft, railroad cars and ships.

Recent private financing transactions arranged by us have ranged in size from under $5 million to $150 million, with maturities from

The stronger countries, he says, are exercising less restraiot in adopting obviously protectionist measures. It is difficult to see any way back to more liberal trading, but "if only we could freeze the situation." he adds hopefully.

GATT Officials Fear Eruption After Talks

of world trade was under some kind of restric-tion in 1976, up from 35 percent in 1974 and 25 percent in 1960. Total trade in 1976 was over $1

Arms and the trade of centrally planned economies has always been restricted but be-tween 1974 and 1976, it extended to iron and steel, accounting for 2 percent of world trade. ships and boats accounting for another 2 percent, and other selected commodities that include half bearings. Footwear and consumer electronics, accounting for I percent.

Hopes for easy solutions to the protectionist problem have been dashed. Studies by trade economists have shown that a pickup in the world economy will ease pressures in only some areas hit by cyclical problems. Even in the case of shiphuilding and steel, only a one-time hoost is expected from an economic upturn because these industries are rapidly losing their cost advantage to developing nations.

One of the cornerstones of the talks, known as the Tokyo Round, is the proposed tariff cuts on industrial goods. But the tariff cuts need to be put in perspective, says one trade economist. Optimistically speaking, he says, if the iodustrial nations — mainly the European Economic Community, the United States and Japan finally agree to cul tariffs by an average 40 percent, it should help the flow of goods, but not to the extent people imagine.

Relatively Meaningless

Industrial country tariffs currently average around 10 percent. A 40 percent, or a 4-point cut over the planned eight years is relatively meaningless in the context, for example, of the impact of currency fluctuations. Some individual sectors with very high tariffs might benefit to a significant degree, but overall, there just is not that much to it.

The real danger, as far as protectionism is concerned, lies in the rewriting of old trade rules, or in the writing of new ones. Some of the proposed new rules might legalize current re-strictive practices that are basically in violation of current GATT rules but which have not been brought under complaint procedures because the burt country fears reprisals. Mareover, the new rules might encourage protectionist action by allowing it.

Mr. Long describes the subtle forms of pro-tectionism being used as "pressures by larger countries on smaller ones to restrain their expons; as insistence that domestic suppliers. competitive or not, be chosen to fill government orders: as anti-dumping action launched without adequate justification; and as subsidies to favored producers that make nonsense of the idea of trade being based on comparative advanuage in normal costs."

Supply Lack Seen Blocking Organic Farms

ST. LOUIS. May 23 (AP-DJ)—With rising production costs squeezing profits, U.S. farmers to recent years have become interested in organic farming—or farming without using chemical fertilizers and pesticides. While conventional farms generally turn in higher yields and gross incomes, two university studies indicate organic farmers can compete financially be-cause they do not have to pay for chemical products. And, al-though only an estimated 1 percent of farms have quit using ehemicals ultogether, many more are becoming more selective about how they use ehemi-

However, despite the evi dence that practically identical bottom-line results can be achieved on organic and conventional farms, makers of agricultural chemicals are not likely to see their markets dwindle from a massive switch to organic farming because "there simply isn't enough manure in the U.S. in supply enough nutrients for organic agriculture," asserts a Midwestern university profes-

U.S. Gold Sale Brings About $180 an Ounce

WASHINGTON, May 23 (UPI)-A Texas man and four European merchant banks apparently bought 300,000 ounces of gold at minimum prices of $180 per ounce today in the first U.S. gold sale in three years.

The General Services Administration said Morris Cannon of San Antonio submitted the high bid of $182.35 for 800 ounces. The highest commercial bid came from Bank Leu of Switzerland at $181.26, also for 800 ounces. But two big Swiss banks and a West German bank apparently bought the remainder. Union Bank of Switzerland offered minimum prices of $180 for 100,000 ounces, while the Swiss Bank Corp. of Zurich and the Dresdner Bank of West Germany offered minimum bids of $180,01 for a combined 232,400

GSA employees calling out the dollar amounts and quantities of the initial bids revealed that the most competitive bidding was in the range of $179-$180 per ounce, which compared with prices in world gold markets today. Walter Frankland Jr., executive viee president of the Silver Users Association, said he was surprised at the "bullish" prices offered for the government gold. With a strong background, The Centrale Rabobank heads a cooperative hanking organisation with over 3100 offices and a combined balance sheet total exceeding 61 billion Dutch guilders (in excess of US $ 26 billion) in 1977. This makes the Rabobank not just one of the largest banks in Holland and one of the 30 largest banks in the world, but also a bank with roots in almost all sectors of Dutch economic life.

The Centrale Rabobank is now expanding worldwide with a full range of banking services. To accelerate this expansion, we recently co-founded the "UNICO BANKING GROUP", linking us with five major European cooperative banks. This, together with the support of London and Confinental Bankers Ltd., has strengthened our operations by giving international clients unparalleled on-the-spot service. In addition, we are active in the Euro-currency and Euro-bond markets. Our international transactions in foreign currencies, Euro-credit loans and participation in new issues, are showing a remarkable growth.

THE LAST CONVERTIBLE By Anton Myrer. Putnum s. 526 pp. $10.95

Reviewed By William Fadiman

THIS is a mammoth work of more than 500 pages endeavoring to capture and depict the extraordinary changes that took place in American culture starting with the 1940s and spanning three dec-

To accomplish this patently diffi-cult task, Myrer has concentrated his attention on the experiences and adventures of five college students from disparate backgrounds who meet as freshmen at Harvard and continue their friendship through the ensuing years, some-times strained and distorted though it is by unexpected circumstances and events. They are known to themselves and their friends and acquaintances as the Five Fusiliers. The glittering symbol hinding them together is a magnificent, luxurious 1938 Packard Super-8 convertible automobile which they promptly dub the Empress. This gleaming example of conspicuous consumption and affluence is originally the property of a handsome Frenchman, the aristocrat in the group; but as time progresses, its ownership is transferred from one to the other, and it functions, importantly throughout acquaintances as the Five Fusiliers. functions, importantly throughout the narrative as the physical link representing the solidarity of their mutual affection.

Myrer is at his best in re-creating their first halcyon year at college when Harvard offered the beckoning promise of "an enchanted stroll towards truth and beauty," and the whole world seemed to be nothing but a gigaotic playground and "an immensely golden dream" to which they had instant and easy access via the Empress. In between spasmodic bouts of studying for exams, they spent a good deal of their days and nights fliring and attending one glamorous party after another.

Myrer is at his best in re-creating their first halcyon year at college when Harvard offered the beckoning promise of "an enchanted stroll lowards truth and beauty," and the whole world seemed to be nothing hut a gigantic playground and "an immensely golden dream" to which they had instant and easy access via the Empress. In between spasmodic houts of studying for exams, they spent a good deal of their days and nights flirting and attending one glamorous party after another. It was the time of the great dance bands, of Artie Shaw and Tommy Dorsey and Benny Goodman, of the Lindy Hop and the Shag, a time for carefree weekends at Cape Cod. a time for gaiety and drinking, for happiness and continued celebration. It was a time when the glitter-ing, untrivibled present seemed un-ending and the future assured and certain, a future which was shattered forever by Pearl Harbor and the grim realities of World War II. a war which took the life of the Frenchman who joined De Gaulle's forces, resulted in another of the Fusiliers becoming a POW and rut deeply into the lives of the remaining three. Through the effective use of an epistolary technique, Myrer brings the horror and tragedy of the armed conflict into sharp and dramatic focus to his characters and readers alike.

During the course of the years, as we follow the varying fates and for-tuoes of the protagonists in their personal and professional lives they encounter romance, marriage and divorce, success and failing sex and jealousy, treachery and betrayal, even death and an astempted suicide on the part of one of them. Their assorted love affairs and the women who influence their lives are not oeglected, and the au-thor has created an interesting gallery of female characters who affect the destiny of the Fusiliers. Out standing among them is the exquisitely beautiful, totally calculating figure of Kay Madden, whose body career encompassed Hollywood stardom, and who falsely believed that she "held the world solidly in her hand." The author of "The Last Convenible" has tackled a multi-charactered story of vesterdays and has written it with verve and skill has written it with verve and skill. While manipulating his numerous plot lines, he has also contrived to give us an interesting, if occasionally superficial, socio-political-psuchological record of a vanished period. As a portrayal of "the most naive, the most credulous of all the unready American generations."

"The Last Convertible" is an intriguing book to the genre of popular guing book to the genre of popular fiction and an engaging addition to the Americana shelf.

On the diagram South's jump re-bid of three hearts after a response of one no-trump was encouraging but nonforcing, so his partner's raise was on the agressive side. But the hands fitted well, and the contract was entirely sound. Ten tricks would have been easy to make with a cormal trump division, but this was oot available.

West, who had been strangely si-lent over the opening bid, led the diamond queen, which was won with the ace. A heart was led to the queen in dummy, and the suit was continued. East put up the nine. so South did oot have to decide whether the heart jack was an honest card or a false card from a holding including the ten. South won, and led a low spade, on which West put his ace. This was oot a good play, for if South had held a singleton spade he would have led it earlier to the dummy. Then West led a second diamond, helping South to shorten

After rulling the second dia-mond lead, South led to the spade jack and played a club to king. West won with the ace and persevered with diamonds, forcing another ruff, which was not unwelcome to the declarer. He crossed to the spade king, led to the club queen, and exited with his remaining club. At the finish, ace-eight of trumps scored tricks over East's ten-four and the game was home.

Ooce East had made the doubtful play of putting up the nine on the second round of trumps, South was sure to make the contract with out help from West. He would have used the two spade entries to dum-my to ruff diamonds and would have reached the same ending after taking black-suit winners.

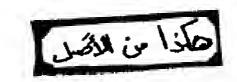

An inspired opening lead of a spade by West, removing an entry from the dummy before South was ready to use it, would have served to defeat the contract oo a doubledummy basis.

Rangers' Heist in Boston Left Them Holding the Bag

By Dave Anderson

BOSTON, May 23 (NYT) - At the time, the New York Rangers thought that they had pulled off the biggest Boston heist since the Brinks holdup. They had snatched Phil Esposito, who once had scored 76 goals in a season, and Carol Vadnais, a defenseman they had long coveted from the Bruins in a trade for Brad Park, a defenseman who was not Bohby Orr, and Jean Ratelle, a center who was not even Jean Ratelle aoymore. That was early in the 1975-76 season when both teams were wobbling on double-runners.

The Rangers are still on them. They are looking to unload Esposito while they tolerate Vadnais, and await the two Swedish saviors (Anders Hedberg and Ulf Nilsson) in search for a new coach. But the Bruins have flourished since that trade and another deal that liberated Rick Middleton from the Ranger treadmill. With the Stanley Cup final still undecided, the three "Boston Rangers" might even have their names engraved on the old silver mug.

"t think the Canadiens realize." Park said, "that they're in a very competitive

Closer Than Ever

And both Park and Ratelle realize that they are closer to a Stanley Cup than they ever have been. With the Rangers in 1972, they trailed the Bruins 3-1 in the championship series, won the fifth game in Boston but lost the sixth at Madison Square Garden.

"I remember the Bruins had the champagne on ice at the fifth game that year," Park said, "but they never drank it."

. If the Bruins stun the Canadiens agaio tonight, they will surely have champagne on ice Thursday when the series returns to Boston Garden, where the Bruins won Sunday night, 4-3, oo Bobby Schmautz's overtime goal. Park had scored the Bruins' third goal, the third of the series for the 29-year-old defenseman, as many as Guy Lafleur. the Canadiens' regal right wing. Duriog the season Park had 22 goals and 57 assists.

"I heard that all the time in New York, but I wasn't as good as Bohby Orr," he said. "But here, all the fans knew that there never would be another one like him. They accepted me as Brad Park instead of 'Is he as good as Bohby was?' The fans have been tremendous to me. My first game here after the trade, it was one of those quiet moments before a face-off and I heard a fan yell, 'Hey, Paaahk, welcome to Baaahston. But hockey's different here than it is in New York. The size of New York. all the other celebrities there, it's hard for New York to get caught up to a hockey aimosphere. But Boston has a hockey atmosphere."

"Hockey's different for me here," he explained. "I was doing a lot more things in New York. I had to be a rushing defenseman, I had to be a defensive defenseman and sometimes I had to be a policeman when things got rough. I had a lot of penalty minutes there. But when I came up here, the coach [Don Cherry] told me if I got backed ioto a corner, have a ball, go to it but otherwise he wanted me on the ice, oot in the penalty box. That's the biggest difference. I don't have to fulfill a policeman's

No More Ghosts

Another difference, strangely, is that be has never been compared to Bobby Orr in Boston, as he was in New York.

Being in that atmosphere surely has lengthened the career of Ratelle, who had 25 goals and 59 assists this season.

"When we got Jean," said Harry Sinden, the Bruins' general manager, "I figured he'd play three more years. But now that those three years are up, I think he's good for another two or three. He's not only a super center but he's a super checker and a super guy. Don Cherry has told me that when he chews out the team every once in a while, he feels like he ought to apologize to Jean for using that language."

If he had remained with the Rangers, the 37-year-old Ratelle might have been phased out by now, as Rod Gilbert was.

"Before the trade. I asked the Rangers for an extension on my contract," Ratelle said, "but they wouldn't give it to me."

Instead the Rangers' general manager then, Emile [Cat] Francis sent him to the Bruins in the trade that Sinden instigated. The Bruins' general manager suggested, "Let's make a big deal, no little deal is going to help us — how about Espo for Park?" Francis asked for Vadnais and Sinden asked for Ratelle as well as Joe Zanussi, a defenseman Sinden has since swapped for Rick Smith, now a Bruin defenseman. Several months later the Rangers' new general manager, John Ferguson, asked the Bruins for Ken Hodge, who had thrived with Esposito in Boston fur so many seasons. Sinden demanded Middleton, a right wing now only 24 years old. Middleton scored 25 goals this season. Hodge is now in the nunors,

"I separate it," Park replied. "In the game, I worry about hockey. The rest of the time. I worry about him,

The Jets, who trailed 2-0 after the first period, became only the second team to win two championrips io the six-year history of the WHA. Winnipeg's previous cham-pionship was in 1975-76 and followed back-to-back otles by the Houston Aeros.

By MICHAEL PLANE INDIANAPOLIS, May 23 (NYT) — Once upon a romantic time, which is before automobiles were recalled by Detroit and years before the first before automobiles were recalled by Detroit and years before the first brought cars to Indianapolis with the same theft of a hubcap, men brought cars to Indianapolis with the same Race cars still arrive by pickup truck at the Indianapolis A Race cars still arrive by pickup truck at the Indianapolis Motor Race cars still arrive by pickup trock at the indianapolis Motor and the specific Speedway in the month of May, but the men who hope to qualify them have little hope to win. In auto racing, and estpecially the Indianapolis have in the American dream is only for the wealthy and the well prepared. The Indianapolis 500 is as American as big business.

Roger Penske is the highly polished, clean-cut, apple-pie American businessman behind the top team at Indianapolis this year, a trim, athletic 41-year-old millionaire with two Chevrolet dealerships, an auto race track and a holding company that controls Penske corporations. "My whole business was built out of racing," he says. "Just the way Jack Nicklans built his business from golf." Winning the 500 would be good for business, and Penske, who retired as a world-class sports-car driver at the age of 27 - for business reasons, naturally - has assembled the team that is the heavy favorite to win next Sunday's million-dollar race.

Penske Racing Inc. will have Tom Sneva starting from the pole position. Rick Mears also from the froot row and Mario Andretti at the back of the 33-car field in the fastest car of all.

Belgian Grand Prix, which he won to take the lead in the world drivers and the standing. Now, as a "replacement" driver, he must start from last place. And the dretti "replaces." Mike Hiss, who put the car on the third row while lo auto racing, even more than in horse racing, chalk usually proves to have the edge. And oot since 1972, when the superteam of Parnelli Jones and Vel Miletich entered Andretti, Al Unser (then trying for his third straight Indy 500 victory) and the national champion, Joe Leonard has one team so dominated practice and qualifying as has Penske's Team Super.

But Penske knows well that superteams do oot always win at Indianapolis, In 1972, Unser finished second, Leonard third and Andretti righth for the Jones-Miletich team.

The winner that year, at the fastest speed in 500 history, 162,962 miles an hour, was Mark Donohue, who died three years later after a crash in the Austrian Grand Prix. That 72 Indy car was entered by Roger Penske. This is Penske's 10th year at the speedway. Never before has he felt so good about his chances. "We've got the best driver lineup, the best crew and the best car," he says proudly.

He also bas a 5,230 square-foot factory in England (Penske Cars Ltd.), where those "best cars" are made, and a 10,890-square-foot shop in Reading, Pa., where they are assembled. In the last 10 years, Penske estimates, he has spent $15 million on his racing program, an almost incredibly low figure by today's inflat-.ed-budget standards.

Roger Penske

Dick King the president of the United States Anto Clob, which sanctions the Indianapolis 500 and the 16 other events on the Championship Trail, has estimated that it would cost a new owner $1 million to run a one-car team for the circuit. Penske runs two cars for the whole circuit, three at Indianapolis. maintains two factories, and hires the best drivers available - all for something like $1.5 million.

Roger gets a dollar for a dollar," says Jim McGee, the manager of the Penske racing team. "He runs an awfully tight shop. But he's oever, ever said to me, You can't have something because it costs too much." Penske saves money by building as much of his own machinery as possible. This is the first year he has appeared at Indianapolis with his own car, the Cosworth-powered Penske PC-6, a direct descendant of the PC-4 with which he campaigned briefly on the Formula One, or Grand Prix. circuit. Andretti says flatly that the new Penske "is the best car I've ever had at Indianapolis.*

The drivers are tops. Andretti, 38, is the superstar, perhaps the finest and most versatile racer to history. Sneva, 29, a former school principal who wears thick glasses even while driving, is the national champion. Mears, 26, USAC's rookie of the year in 1976, is still a rookie at Indianapolis, but, like the two stars he has been learning from, he fits the Penske mold. He, too, is a salesman.

Settion up the cars are experienced, and independent, crews. Derrell Soppe and Laurie Gerrisb are back for second seasons as chiefs on the Andretti and Sneva cars, respectively. Derrick Walker, who was crew chief on the Penske Grand Prix team nd now is in charge of the factory in England, heads the Mears crew. Karl Kainhofer is the engine man for all three cars. Otten, a team that has the two leading cars in a race will issue orders for one or the other to win, especially if a season-long point standing is involved. But Penske says that, because his three cars have individual sponsors, he will let them race to the finish, even if they are one, two, hree entering the last lap. The Indianapolis 500 is "serious business," says Penske, whose companies gross almost $100 million a year. "There's nothing like a victory to boost employee morale," he says.

"We have over a thousand employees in the Northeast, and when we woo the Pocono 500 last year it just ereated a great spirit. Everyone in business is pushing for more and more production, and this is one way we've done it.

The library is publishing such inside accounts as part of its continuing contribution to the Bicentennial. At first, Paul Smith, the editor, thought of a four-volume supplement to Burnett, but it was soon evident that instead of the carlier edition's 6,000 documents there were now 17,000 available from about 300 of the 343 congressmen (there were no congresswomen).

With support from the Ford Foundation and from Congress, plans were expanded according-ly. Each 18th-century congressional year is now being covered in about three volumes; it takes almost a year of work to edit and annotate each volume.

Smith hopes the 25th volume will be ready by his 60th birth-day, June 21, 1991. Of course, documents have now turned up too late for inclusion in the chronology of Volumes I and II, so there will have to be a supplement, perhaps even a whole new edition for the Tricentennial.
